There are two days in every week about which we should not worry, two days which should be kept free from fears and apprehensions.

One of these days is Yesterday, with its mistakes and cares, its faults and blunders, its aches and pains. Yesterday has passed forever beyond our control. All the money in the world cannot bring back yesterday. We cannot undo a single act we performed; we cannot erase a single word said.

Yesterday is gone!

The other day we should not worry about is Tomorrow with its possible burdens, its large promise and poor performance. Tomorrow's sun will rise, either in splendor or behind a mask of clouds but it will rise. Until it does, we have no stake in tomorrow, for it is yet unborn.

This leaves only one day Today! Any man can fight the battle of just one day.

It is only when you and I have the burdens in those awful eternities - Yesterday and Tomorrow that we break down.

It is not the experience of Today that drives men mad it is the remorse of bitter-ness for something which happened yesterday and the dread of what tomorrow may bring.

Let us, therefore, live but one day at a time.
